For Service in Peninsular War

It was with interest that I read the paragraph from The Globe files of one hundred years ago (March 26th, 1849) about the late arrival of medals for service in Wellington's campaign. I have one of these medals in my possession that belonged to my great-grandfather.

He, along with two other veterans, were given free grants of land

Artillery. He died on July 29th, 1849. He had heard that the medal was on its way but died before it reached him.

He was a weaver in Paisley, Scotland, before enlisting, his wife going along as a nurse. His regiment was sent to Canada, just before the Battle of Waterloo, during the War of 1812. My grandfather was born in the barracks at Prescott, Ont. A large number of his descendants are scattered over Canada, United States and England at the present time. His only living grandson, James Paul, of Dawson Creek, B.C., has written for a picture of the medal, so I am sending one along to you also.

northwest of the village of Newburgh in the County of Lennox and Addington. These men were William Nugent, William Allen and William Paul.

My great-grandfather's name is engraved on the edge of the medal. His rank was gunner in the Royal arrival.

Drama Festival Opens

Goderich, April 20.—The second annual Huron County Drama Festival, sponsored by the Goderich Drama Club, was officially opened last night by William Drew Jr., former Goderich boy, now associated with a New York theatre company, and winner of the Dominion Festival Award for 1948. Three one-act plays were presented to a large audience who filled MacKay Hall. H. K. Baskette of London is the adjudicator of the festival, which will continue again this evening.

Frederick H. Crocker

Stratford, April 20 (CP).—Frederick Howard Crocker, 72, a former Stratford business man, died in hospital here today following a brief illness. For the past year he operated a general store at Carleton Place, where he also acted as postmaster. Born in Norwich Township, he resided in Stratford the greater part of his life. For some years he operated a bicycle shop on Erie St.

Butter dealers realize margarine is here to stay, but they're sharply critical of government failure to control its manufacture.

"About the only thing the manufacturers can't put in margarine is arsenic or rat poisoning," commented one dealer. "When the margarine case was before the Supreme Court, the federal government gave an assurance that manufacture would be controlled if the court ruled it legal."

"They didn't have a single regulation ready," he continued, "and there won't be any here until the provincial regulations are proclaimed. Yet there's one brand of margarine on the market now containing 35 per cent water and 5 per cent salt."

"With the present floor price for butter, margarine certainly has the jump," he said.

Paul Family Holds International Reunion

People named Paul from as far away as California and British Columbia gathered at O'Neill's Pavilion in Erinsville recently to honor their forefathers, chiefly William Paul and the former Janet McClay, who came from Scotland to Canada before 1812.

William Paul was born in Glasgow in 1789 and served in the British Army as a gunner in the Royal Artillery. His regiment, under the Duke of Wellington, took part in seven major battles during the Peninsular War. His wife followed him on the campaigns and served as a nurse.

Later his regiment was sent to Canada for the War of 1812, and he was given a grant of 200 acres of land where the village of Newburg now stands. In 1848 William Paul and all other veterans of the Peninsular War were awarded medals engraved with the names of the seven major battles of the camping. This medal is now highly prized by the Paul family.

William Paul and his wife had four sons, James, William, Matthew, George and Robert, and those present at the reunion were all direct descendants of those four.

Decorations at the gathering were under the charge of Mrs. E. B. Paul, of Napanee, and the cake was donated by Mary Alice Paul Nugent, a great-granddaughter of William Paul. Place cards in blue and white were donated by Dorothy Paul, of Toronto, and George Paul, also of Toronto was the master of ceremonies.

James E. Paul, of Jamesville, N.Y., the fourth in his line to hold that name, addressed the group on behalf of the descendants of James Paul; Horace Paul, of Roblin, represented the William Paul branch; Donald S. Paul, of Napanee, spoke for the William Paul descendants, and George Paul, of Toronto, represented the Robert Paul branch.

A display of old family photographs and heirlooms was collected, and proved of great interest.

From Kingston at the gathering were Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Paul.
